Will do.

And thank you, Jen! You did much of the heavy lifting. I asked Dave to send since he was pinged by the person (Margie) whom everyone was trying to satisfy with this info.

Have a good night.

Thanks. The number percentage that I will quote is a 17.6% savings and in GSA IT from FY14 through 16 (the baseline was FY13) and with savings estimated to increase to 19.1% by FY18. These are all 100% defensible.

I will have to send thom's raw data over to Margie. She will be able to pull out what is usable for her discussion.

There is probably not enough time for us to dig up the denominators that made up the baseline for the savings numbers in the document by 8:15 AM.

Good morning, Margie. The numbers are vetted and have been stated publicly over time so confidence in them should be reasonably high. The couple of cost avoidance numbers in there were based on government estimates at the time and should be able to stand on their own. I will have to see if we have the baseline numbers readily available for the actual savings numbers. I am sure that baselined were created but we have not really referenced them for quite a while so digging them up may be an adventure.

What time is your presentation and when are you walking down the deck ahead of that presentation? If early, I'll be fighting people coming into work... And I also want to give FAS a deadline.

Good evening, Margie and Sean.

Thanks for your patience. Attached is the doc that contains some of the high level initiatives in GSA that focused on technology transformation internal to GSA provided by GSA IT and as an external service provided by TTS. Due to the short time, we focused on content, some stats regarding savings and business value and some customer testimonials for value context. The text is not highly edited so please feel free to word-smith for readability as you build your presentation for tomorrow.

The one missing, but critical element is the transformative services provided by FAS. Those user stories are being developed this evening and will be sent under separate e-mail in the morning. We wanted to get the GSA IT and TTS info to you ASAP.

Ping me if you have any questions as you review the info or need anything else this evening.

As I think about it, California may be a slightly less relevant example in this case since it involves work at the state level. We may want to try to focus on federal for purposes of this exercise.

Team,

Just had a phone call from Sean (works for Margie in OFCIO). You all may know some of this already, but in case not....

Chris Liddell is preparing a briefing for POTUS happening on wednesday morning on strategic initiatives, and wants to include "Federal IT" as one among a variety of topics that will be covered. Margie and Sean are putting together slides to support the section and are framing some of the potential of this as an initiative area around the potential for cost savings, both in mission-focused IT and infrastructure/"back office" functions.

Do we have an example of our work that we'd want to contribute to the effort that would be compelling at the POTUS level (and that would presumably get him excited about supporting Federal IT as a strategic initiative area)?

I asked Sean about how "iron clad" the cost savings potential or achieved needed to be, and he said the more compelling the better, although some of the other examples they are working with will still be somewhat caveated.

We would need to identify something ASAP, and work on getting the info to Sean today/tonight.

Thoughts?

Lesley and GSA IT team,

FYI, Margie has one additional ask regarding baseline numbers. Let's pull what we have and dump them into the shared document. Best effort is OK by whatever timeline she gives for locking down her presentation deck. I will take the task of swinging whatever we have over to her just ahead of them.

Good morning, Margie. The numbers are vetted and have been stated publicly over time so confidence in them should be reasonably high. The couple of cost avoidance numbers in there were based on government estimates at the time and should be able to stand on their own. I will have to see if we have the baseline numbers readily available for the actual savings numbers. I am sure that baselined were created but we have not really referenced them for quite a while so digging them up may be an adventure.

What time is your presentation and when are you walking down the deck ahead of that presentation? If early, I'll be fighting people coming into work... And I also want to give FAS a deadline.

As I think about it, California may be a slightly less relevant example in this case since it involves work at the state level. We may want to try to focus on federal for purposes of this exercise.

Just had a phone call from Sean (works for Margie in OFCIO). You all may know some of this already, but in case not....

Chris Liddell is preparing a briefing for POTUS happening on wednesday morning on strategic initiatives, and wants to include "Federal IT" as one among a variety of topics that will be covered. Margie and Sean are putting together slides to support the section and are framing some of the potential of this as an initiative area around the potential for cost savings, both in mission-focused IT and infrastructure/"back office" functions.

Do we have an example of our work that we'd want to contribute to the effort that would be compelling at the POTUS level (and that would presumably get him excited about supporting Federal IT as a strategic initiative area)?

I asked Sean about how "iron clad" the cost savings potential or achieved needed to be, and he said the more compelling the better, although some of the other examples they are working with will still be somewhat caveated.

We would need to identify something ASAP, and work on getting the info to Sean today/tonight.

Dave, can you take the lead, send what we have to Margie. Let her know that it is 2/3 of our response and that our Acting Administrator would like to have one GSA response, and we will submit something from FAS as soon as we receive it? This way, we are not delaying OMB. Tim wrote to Tom to see what they have.

Sound good? I don't think we were clear to FAS that we needed this tonight. Thank you! Please cc me, tim, tony, jack and the others you copied earlier.

Good morning, Margie. The numbers are vetted and have been stated publicly over time so confidence in them should be reasonably high. The couple of cost avoidance numbers in there were based on government estimates at the time and should be able to stand on their own. I will have to see if we have the baseline numbers readily available for the actual savings numbers. I am sure that baselined were created but we have not really referenced them for quite a while so digging them up may be an adventure.

What time is your presentation and when are you walking down the deck ahead of that presentation? If early, I'll be fighting people coming into work... And I also want to give FAS a deadline.

As I think about it, California may be a slightly less relevant example in this case since it involves work at the state level. We may want to try to focus on federal for purposes of this exercise.

Just had a phone call from Sean (works for Margie in OFCIO). You all may know some of this already, but in case not....

Chris Liddell is preparing a briefing for POTUS happening on wednesday morning on strategic initiatives, and wants to include "Federal IT" as one among a variety of topics that will be covered. Margie and Sean are putting together slides to support the section and are framing some of the potential of this as an initiative area around the potential for cost savings, both in mission-focused IT and infrastructure/"back office" functions.

Do we have an example of our work that we'd want to contribute to the effort that would be compelling at the POTUS level (and that would presumably get him excited about supporting Federal IT as a strategic initiative area)?

I asked Sean about how "iron clad" the cost savings potential or achieved needed to be, and he said the more compelling the better, although some of the other examples they are working with will still be somewhat caveated.

We would need to identify something ASAP, and work on getting the info to Sean today/tonight.

Thanks, Joanna. I just heard from Margie, OMB is locking their deck at 8:15 AM (the meeting is at 9 AM) so time is very short.

There is probably not enough time for us to dig up the denominators that made up the baseline for the savings numbers in the document by 8:15 AM.

Good morning, Margie. The numbers are vetted and have been stated publicly over time so confidence in them should be reasonably high. The couple of cost avoidance numbers in there were based on government estimates at the time and should be able to stand on their own. I will have to see if we have the baseline numbers readily available for the actual savings numbers. I am sure that baselined were created but we have not really referenced them for quite a while so digging them up may be an adventure.

What time is your presentation and when are you walking down the deck ahead of that presentation? If early, I'll be fighting people coming into work... And I also want to give FAS a deadline.

Due to the tight time constraint from OMB, we had to submit something this evening. As Dave explains below, we sent it incomplete as we fully intended for it to be a GSA submission. As soon as you complete the FAS portion, we will need to forward to OMB. They need this for a meeting in the morning. The GSAIT and TTS submission is attached. Thanks for your prompt attention!

Jen, to your question, if we think we have some examples to contribute, in the interest of time, I can loop Sean back in with the right POCs to take it directly from there.

As I think about it, California may be a slightly less relevant example in this case since it involves work at the state level. We may want to try to focus on federal for purposes of this exercise.

Team,

Just had a phone call from Sean (works for Margie in OFCIO). You all may know some of this already, but in case not....

Chris Liddell is preparing a briefing for POTUS happening on wednesday morning on strategic initiatives, and wants to include "Federal IT" as one among a variety of topics that will be covered. Margie and Sean are putting together slides to support the section and are framing some of the potential of this as an initiative area around the potential for cost savings, both in mission-focused IT and infrastructure/"back office" functions.

Do we have an example of our work that we'd want to contribute to the effort that would be compelling at the POTUS level (and that would presumably get him excited about supporting Federal IT as a strategic initiative area)?

I asked Sean about how "iron clad" the cost savings potential or achieved needed to be, and he said the more compelling the better, although some of the other examples they are working with will still be somewhat caveated.

We would need to identify something ASAP, and work on getting the info to Sean today/tonight.

Thanks Jeff-

The concern was making sure that nothing went in to place tomorrow without action from us. It sounds like waiting until tomorrow won't create anything that is irreversible in terms of a regulatory change. Is that correct?

Tim,

Thus far, we have identified one item scheduled to publish in the Federal Register tomorrow. It is a 30 day extension of the comment period on a FAR case about effective communication between Government and industry. The extension was based on a request from the American Bar Association and makes the new closing date for public comments March 2, 2017. The notice went up for public inspection on January 19. This case comes out of the National Defense Authorization Act (section 887) of 2016.

What action would you like us to take on that notice? Keeping it in place simply extends the time for the public to submit comments.

In terms of the pending FAR case on non-retaliation for disclosure of compensation information, the Office of the Federal Register had not given a publication date. We will contact them Monday to pull the case.

I'm still coordinating with the rest of OGP to identify if there are any other unpublished regulations at the Office of the Federal Register. We will also begin to identify published regulations which are not yet in effect.

Will confirm upon completion,

Jeff

Jack,

Last evening the President's Chief of Staff signed a memorandum freezing all regulations (see attached). Section 2 of this memorandum requires agencies immediately withdraw regulations from the Office of the Federal Register (OFR). This needs to be done as soon as possible. For instance, we know there was at least one proposed rule regarding the FAR pending at OFR on Thursday. There may well be other GSA rules due to be put on public inspection at OFR on Monday. Your acting regulatory policy officer (sometimes called "regulatory second") has been informed of this requirement and should be working on the paperwork necessary to withdraw these rules. I strongly suggest you work with them to make sure timely compliance today. More guidance may be forthcoming.

Thanks and let me know if you have any questions,

Jack,

Last evening the President's Chief of Staff signed a memorandum freezing all regulations (see attached). Section 2 of this memorandum requires agencies immediately withdraw regulations from the Office of the Federal Register (OFR). This needs to be done as soon as possible. For instance, we know there was at least one proposed rule regarding the FAR pending at OFR on Thursday. There may well be other GSA rules due to be put on public inspection at OFR on Monday. Your acting regulatory policy officer (sometimes called "regulatory second") has been informed of this requirement and should be working on the paperwork necessary to withdraw these rules. I strongly suggest you work with them to make sure timely compliance today. More guidance may be forthcoming.

Thanks and let me know if you have any questions,

Tim,

Thus far, we have identified one item scheduled to publish in the Federal Register tomorrow. It is a 30 day extension of the comment period on a FAR case about effective communication between Government and industry. The extension was based on a request from the American Bar Association and makes the new closing date for public comments March 2, 2017. The notice went up for public inspection on January 19. This case comes out of the National Defense Authorization Act (section 887) of 2016.

What action would you like us to take on that notice? Keeping it in place simply extends the time for the public to submit comments.

In terms of the pending FAR case on non-retaliation for disclosure of compensation information, the Office of the Federal Register had not given a publication date. We will contact them Monday to pull the case.

I'm still coordinating with the rest of OGP to identify if there are any other unpublished regulations at the Office of the Federal Register. We will also begin to identify published regulations which are not yet in effect.

Will confirm upon completion,

Jeff

Jack,

Last evening the President's Chief of Staff signed a memorandum freezing all regulations (see attached). Section 2 of this memorandum requires agencies immediately withdraw regulations from the Office of the Federal Register (OFR). This needs to be done as soon as possible. For instance, we know there was at least one proposed rule regarding the FAR pending at OFR on Thursday. There may well be other GSA rules due to be put on public inspection at OFR on Monday. Your acting regulatory policy officer (sometimes called "regulatory second") has been informed of this requirement and should be working on the paperwork necessary to withdraw these rules. I strongly suggest you work with them to make sure timely compliance today. More guidance may be forthcoming.

Thanks and let me know if you have any questions,

Marcus Peacock

Tim,

Thus far, we have identified one item scheduled to publish in the Federal Register tomorrow. It is a 30 day extension of the comment period on a FAR case about effective communication between Government and industry. The extension was based on a request from the American Bar Association and makes the new closing date for public comments March 2, 2017. The notice went up for public inspection on January 19. This case comes out of the National Defense Authorization Act (section 887) of 2016.

What action would you like us to take on that notice? Keeping it in place simply extends the time for the public to submit comments.

In terms of the pending FAR case on non-retaliation for disclosure of compensation information, the Office of the Federal Register had not given a publication date. We will contact them Monday to pull the case.

I'm still coordinating with the rest of OGP to identify if there are any other unpublished regulations at the Office of the Federal Register. We will also begin to identify published regulations which are not yet in effect.

Will confirm upon completion,

Jeff

Hi Jack

See the attached. Jeff is working with OMB to take appropriate action.

Also we have confirmed that any additional regulatory changes would need to be signed by the GSA Administrator before it goes to OFR so we have a control in place to stop anything else.

Call me if we need to discuss further.

Hi folks,

From my end.... don't judge me .... I am staying on in my current position for a little while. Without going into details, my position and I were converted to pre-existing career status so I can help get folks here through the transition. Since I seem to be having trouble wanting the jobs that want me, and only pining away for those bad boy jobs that take me a few dates and then dump me, I now have time to go through therapy, or get pregnant with a job.

Thanks for the friendship, and you will continue to be able to find me here (lernerri@state.gov) or via my personal email: (b) (6)

Wishing everyone my very, very best. Can't believe that tomorrow is our last day. It was a joy to meet all of you, and an honor to serve with you. You are all amazing and remember what POTUS said in Chicago:

It falls to each of us to be those anxious, jealous guardians of our democracy. Embrace the joyous task we have been given to continually try to improve this great nation of ours because, for all our outward differences, we in fact all share the same proud type, the most important office in a democracy, citizen.

I will miss the Administration dearly, but I'm definitely looking forward to continuing my service as citizen. Much work remains PLW crew. Keep the faith, stay strong, and I'll see you on the other side.

POTUS appointed me the Acting First Vice President and Vice Chairman of the Board at EXIM, so I am able to stay on until asked to leave by the POTUS-E.

I don't know how long that will be, but am happy to share my personal coordinates with you all.

We are a good lot and will end up in good places where our paths will cross again I am sure!

In the meantime, we can do group therapy.

Hi folks,

From my end.... don't judge me .... I am staying on in my current position for a little while. Without going into details, my position and I were converted to pre-existing career status so I can help get folks here through the transition. Since I seem to be having trouble wanting the jobs that want me, and only pining away for those bad boy jobs that take me a few dates and then dump me, I now have time to go through therapy, or get pregnant with a job.

Thanks for the friendship, and you will continue to be able to find me here (lernerj@state.gov) or via my personal email: (b) (6)

Good luck to everyone, and see you soon, I hope!

In April 2007, I attended the inaugural Women for Obama event, a luncheon at the Chicago Hilton. I was so inspired by the energy in that room that I signed up as a headquarters volunteer, and the ten years since that pivotal day have been the experience of a lifetime. I am so proud to have been part of the team that helped elect this President and support him throughout his very consequential time in office.

My pride in our accomplishments is matched only by the honor I feel in having had the opportunity to work with all of you. The people who signed on to support this particular President are the best there is. From the beginning, he attracted those who are inspired to be involved in something bigger than themselves, and who are willing to fight despite the odds. I am so grateful to be a part of the Obama family, and hope our paths cross again as we continue to make a difference.

Please keep in touch,

CATHY SOLOMON

Director, Office of Administration

White House women want to be in the room where it happens

By Juliet Eilperin <<http://www.washingtonpost.com/people/juliet-eilperin>> September 13 at 12:16 PM

Four women share their experiences working in the White House: the grueling hours, dealing with a 'boys' club' mentality and, crucially, getting access to the president. (Deirdra O'Regan/The Washington Post)

When President Obama took office, two-thirds of his top aides were men. Women complained of having to elbow their way into important meetings. And when they got in, their voices were sometimes ignored.

The Post is exploring how women gain, consolidate and experience power in politics and policy. <<https://www.washingtonpost.com/pb/women-in-power/>>

So female staffers adopted a meeting strategy they called "amplification": When a woman made a key point, other women would repeat it, giving credit to its author. This forced the men in the room to recognize the contribution - and denied them the chance to claim the idea as their own.

"We just started doing it, and made a purpose of doing it. It was an everyday thing," said one former Obama aide who requested anonymity to speak frankly. Obama noticed, she and others said, and began calling more often on women and junior aides.

For decades, women have struggled to crack the code of power in the White House, where grueling hours, hyper-aggressive colleagues and lack of access to the boss have proved challenging to women from both parties. The West Wing is also home to the ultimate glass ceiling: Men have had a lock on the Oval Office for more than 200 years.

That could change if Democrat Hillary Clinton prevails in November. Not only would she break a gender barrier by winning the presidency, she also could bring in a female chief of staff - another first in the White House - as she did as first lady, as a senator and as Obama's secretary of state.

During Obama's second term, women gained parity with men in the president's inner circle; Clinton has actually had women outnumber men at times among her senior staff.

Despite his barbs directed against women, GOP nominee Donald Trump has installed some female managers <https://www.washingtonpost.com/politics/donald-trump-a-champion-of-women-his-female-employees-think-so/2015/11/23/7eafac80-88da-11e5-9a07-453018f9a0ec\_story.html> while working in the male-dominated construction industry, and he has at least three women playing senior roles in his campaign.

The White House is unlike any workplace in America. Power is defined by proximity to a single individual: the president. Being "in the room" - whether it's the Oval Office or the 7:30 a.m. senior staff meeting where the chief of staff hashes out the administration's top priorities - is crucial to exerting influence.

And the job is a constant race against the clock: Presidents have as few as four years to pursue an agenda and cement a legacy. Burnout is endemic, and top White House aides typically leave after less than three years.

"Given the short period you are in the White House, you leverage every minute to ensure that you can be there, fully committed and totally present," said Juleanna Glover, who served as press secretary to Vice President Richard B. Cheney during President George W. Bush's first term.

Women often struggle just to get a foot in the door. Presidents typically select their most senior advisers from the male-dominated ranks of their campaigns. As late as the Eisenhower administration, the only women working in the West Wing were secretaries - and they were barred from dining with men in the White House mess.

"Regardless of the weather, we had to slog out to any hole-in-the-wall we could find," recalled Patty Herman, who worked there until she met and married George Herman, the White House correspondent for CBS. "Now, I understand, that's changed."

<image002.jpg>

Once your foot is in the door, you have to get a seat at the table. Anne Wexler, who served as Jimmy Carter's assistant for public outreach, complained that Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan never invited her to a key daily meeting where aides offered ideas to the president, even though Jordan publicly described Wexler as "the most competent woman in Democratic politics."

"Personally, I never spent a great deal of time with the president," Wexler said in a 1980 interview for Carter's presidential library. "I think that was a mistake on [Carter's] part."

Bonnie Newman got a job in the Reagan administration in 1981 after playing squash with Helene von Damm, who had acted as Ronald Reagan's personal secretary since the 1960s. Although von Damm had "access and proximity" to the president, Newman recalled, "there weren't a whole lot of other women" in the West Wing. "So when you looked around, you looked a little out of place."

In Bill Clinton's presidency, several women gained greater influence, including the first lady, who spearheaded his signature health-care reform initiative. But Hillary Clinton retreated to a more traditional role after the initiative foundered. And the president's affair with intern Monica Lewinsky served to undermine his claims of gender progress.

Nabors; OMB Director Jack Lew; Biden; and senior adviser Valerie Jarrett. (Pete Souza/White House)

In the early days of the Obama administration, the West Wing was a well-documented bastion of testosterone, due largely to the dominating roles of men such as Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel, now mayor of Chicago, and then-economic adviser Lawrence H. Summers. At a dinner in November 2009, several senior female aides complained to the president that men enjoyed greater access and often muscled them out of key policy discussions.

"If you didn't come in from the campaign, it was a tough circle to break into," said Anita Dunn, who left her post as White House communications director shortly after that meeting. Dunn says it was a matter of simple math: "Given the makeup of the campaign, there were just more men than women."

The atmosphere has changed considerably in Obama's second term. Many of the original players have moved on. Today, Obama's closest aides - the ones who sit in the 7:30 a.m. meeting and earn the top White House salary of $176,461 a year - are equally divided between men and women. Overall, the average man still earns about 16 percent more than the average woman. But half of all White House departments - from the National Security Council to the Office of Legislative Affairs - are headed by women.

"I think having a critical mass makes a difference," said White House senior adviser Valerie Jarrett, who came in with the president and remains one of his top aides. "It's fair to say that there was a lot of testosterone flowing in those early days. Now we have a little more estrogen that provides a counterbalance."

National security adviser Susan E. Rice also has served throughout Obama's administration. In previous positions, Rice said, she had to push to get into key gatherings. "It's not pleasant to have to appeal to a man to say, 'Include me in that meeting,'" she said.

<image004.jpg>

Now, said Domestic Policy Council Director Cecilia Muñoz said, "the folks who were jockeying to get into meetings or struggling over manifests are just kind of not around anymore."

Even the speaking order in such meetings can make a difference. Toward the end of George W. Bush's second term, legislative affairs director Candi Wolff and press secretary Dana Perino sat at the ends of Chief of Staff Joshua Bolten's long table, and spoke first because the legislative and media climate were more relevant than new policy proposals at that point.

"It was Dana and me, tag-teaming," Wolff recalled.

Second terms have traditionally served as a critical period for women, an opportunity to move up after the men move out. After Obama's reelection, Jennifer Palmieri replaced Dan Pfeiffer as communications director. She remembers the moment the president expressed his confidence in her and shared his high expectations.

"This is it, you're in the room. There is no other room: This is the Oval Office," Palmieri recalls him saying. "You're here for a reason, and I want to know what you think."

Sylvia Mathews Burwell, secretary of health and human services, describes a "woman pull" during Clinton's second term, when she was promoted from deputy chief of staff to deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget. Another woman, Maria Echaveste, got Burwell's former position, and a third woman, Minyon Moore, moved into Echaveste's spot.

In George W. Bush's second term, Condoleezza Rice and Margaret Spellings were promoted to the Cabinet, becoming secretary of state and secretary of education, respectively. Other women moved into more senior White House jobs, including Wolff and Perino.

Regardless of when they served, women described a constant struggle to balance work and family, especially if they had young children. After Bush was elected in 2000, longtime aide Karen Hughes said she recoiled when incoming Chief of Staff Andrew Card tried to establish a 24/7 work schedule.

Hughes said she called Bush and told him that she didn't "have to be there at 10:30 at night" to do her job.

Bush responded quickly, Hughes said, telling Card: "Don't run off all my working mothers!"

Although Card made accommodations, Hughes left the White House after a year and a half, saying the job was too hard on her "homesick" Texas family. That fact hit her one Saturday morning, she said, when her teenage son asked her to bake him some brownies and she was simply too exhausted to do it.

Sarah Bianchi had two children under 3 when she joined the White House in June 2011 as a deputy assistant to the president and the vice president's head of economic policy. She left in May 2014 to return to the private sector.

"Half the battle from there is parenting," Bianchi said. "We're just not doing well enough on this."

White House aides say a slew of recent changes has improved conditions for working mothers. Last year, when legislative affairs director Katie Beirne Fallon and public engagement director Paulette Aniskoff were pregnant, the General Services Administration set up a tasteful Japanese screen in a West Wing bathroom to provide a private spot for pumping breast milk. (Years earlier, then-Deputy Chief of Staff Alyssa Mastromonaco had successfully procured a tampon machine.)

Obama carries the twin boys of Katie Beirne Fallon, director of legislative affairs, into the Oval Office just a few months after they were born in 2015. (Pete Souza/White House)

Meanwhile, the administration encourages staff to take advantage of up to 12 weeks of paid medical and family leave - twice as much as most federal employees.

Aniskoff said she assumed she would have to quit when her son was born but decided to stay after Jarrett helped her work out the logistics.

"Even though I know theoretically that we had paid leave and all these things," Aniskoff said, "I just didn't know that it applied to me."

Good morning ladies -

For those of you who don't know me, I am the Chief of Staff at the Department of Agriculture. A couple of us have been talking about getting all of the lady chiefs together, I have finally tracked down e-mails for everyone so we are trying to finally make this happen. I know everyone has busy schedules but I thought it would be fun to do a breakfast or lunch. I'm happy to host here at USDA, I can also check with Cab Affairs to see if we could gather at the WH Mess.

I have copied my assistant Jonathan Barnett here, perhaps the best way to get this going is to have your assistants connected to him and he can work to nail down date options that work the best. If there are general times that work for your schedule (am/lunch/pm) or days of the week, that would be a great place to start. Thanks so much!! Looking forward to getting everyone together.

He's been on all the emails requesting inspections etc...

I don't know how far along he is with the forms but he does use the same accreditor.

Looping in will.

Thx

He's been on all the emails requesting inspections etc...
I don't know how far along he is with the forms but he does use the same accreditor.
Looping in will.
Thx

Attachments: Vetting EO, January 17, 2017.pdf

Colleagues –

As you probably saw, earlier this week the President signed the attached Executive Order (EO), which updates EO 13488 and EO 13467 to modernize and strengthen how the Federal Government performs and safeguards background investigations for its employees and contractors. <https://www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2017/01/17/amending-civil-service-rules-executive-order-13488-and-executive-order>

The EO updates and revises governance authorities, roles, and responsibilities related to Federal background investigations, and will better enable agencies to develop and adopt modern tools – such as continuous vetting and automated records checks – to ensure a trusted government workforce and protect against insider threats. The updates to EO 13467 are part of the Federal Government's continued efforts to keep its tools, systems, and processes for managing such sensitive information and conducting background investigations on pace with advancements in technology, and to create a more secure and effective Federal background investigations infrastructure. See summary below.

These changes will provide future administrations with a structure to continue the process of long term and sustained modernization of the background investigations process. Thanks for all of your and your staffs continued input and collaboration to advance these efforts.

We look forward to meeting with the PAC in the near future to continue our discussions on reform efforts. Please feel free to reach out if you have any questions in the meantime.

Best,
Dustin

Key reforms enabled by this EO include the following:

- Authorizes continual vetting of the Federal workforce. Ensuring that individuals meet the high standards for Federal service on a constant basis throughout their tenure with the government will enable us to detect concerning conduct or events much earlier in the process and identify insiders who may wish to harm people or property, or compromise sensitive information.
- Establishes requirements for data-driven analysis. The EO explicitly institutes continuous performance improvement into the vetting process, which will measure performance, obtain data, and identify emerging trends. This will enable ongoing improvements to policy and information technology systems, and enhanced investigative operations.
- Strengthens and clarifies oversight responsibilities vesting oversight and policy authority for issuing Federal identification credentials with OPM, designating it as the Suitability and Credentialing Executive Agent. This updates the Security Executive Agent and Suitability Executive Agent structure in place and working effectively since 2008.
- Brings standards into better alignment. The EO will enable the establishment of common standards for background investigations and adjudications, and for reciprocally recognizing them. This will streamline workforce flexibility and Federal government hiring by allowing individuals to move to other government positions without having to undergo new, redundant background vetting.
- Eliminates obsolete authorities. The new EO will revoke an Eisenhower-era executive order containing cumbersome and obsolete requirements that have been a barrier to modernizing and automating standards and procedures.
- It preserves the existing oversight and policy-making structure. The current governance structure has been effective at ensuring senior leadership attention and an enterprise-wide focus to reform efforts.

These changes are designed to sustain and accelerate reform, support an efficient and effective vetting enterprise, and ensure a Federal and contractor workforce that is trusted to conduct the Nation's business.

To: "TTS (Technology Transformation Services)" <tts@gsa.gov<mailto:tts@gsa.gov>>

Hello all,

I have some encouraging news to pass along. Last Friday, Todd Park led a meeting between:

- * Dave Vorhaus (WH Chief of Staff office)
- * Margie Graves (US CIO office)

- * Evan Cooke and Cori Zarek (US CTO office)

- * Charles Worthington (USDS)

- * me (TTS)

and three new members of the Transition Team:

- * Reed Cordish, who will be working on personnel appointments and multi-agency initiatives (including continuation of IT modernization)

- * Gerrit Lansing, Chief Digital Officer at the RNC

- * Dirk Eyman, Director of IT and Network Operations at the RNC

The meeting went extremely well. The Transition Team members were completely supportive from the start. They were extremely impressed with what we're doing and with the whole constellation of interconnected efforts. Reed asked us to let our teams know that the incoming team sees our work as a crucially important and non-partisan priority. They also emphasized that they appreciate that the work is completely dependent on the talented people we have and they hope everyone will continue their service into the new Administration.

Today Reed followed up and asked us to share this note to Todd from Jared Kushner (incoming senior advisor to the President):

Todd,

Thank you to the leadership of the US CIO, USDS, TTS, and OSTP for the detailed presentation of their initiatives. I have heard only great things about you and the program you have built. The continued dedication to modernizing Government Tech is a mission critical task and we look forward to working with the many talented, dedicated tech professionals in these offices.

Yours,

Jared

I'm so pleased to get this confirmation that the incoming Administration values and supports our work, and even more that they recognize that it all depends on the talented individuals we have.

I joined TTS two months ago because of you and the work you do. Since then, I've become more and more impressed with your work, moved by your dedication, and committed to doing what I can to help us thrive and succeed. Thank you all for what you do.

Rob

Subject: Transition team update

To: "TTS (Technology Transformation Services)" <tts@gsa.gov<mailto:tts@gsa.gov>>

Hello all,

I have some encouraging news to pass along. Last Friday, Todd Park led a meeting between:

- * Dave Vorhaus (WH Chief of Staff office)
- * Margie Graves (US CIO office)
- * Evan Cooke and Cori Zarek (US CTO office)
- * Charles Worthington (USDS)
- * me (TTS)

and three new members of the Transition Team:

- * Reed Cordish, who will be working on personnel appointments and multi-agency initiatives (including continuation of IT modernization)

- * Gerrit Lansing, Chief Digital Officer at the RNC

- * Dirk Eyman, Director of IT and Network Operations at the RNC

The meeting went extremely well. The Transition Team members were completely supportive from the start. They were extremely impressed with what we're doing and with the whole constellation of interconnected efforts. Reed asked us to let our teams know that the incoming team sees our work as a crucially important and non-partisan priority. They also emphasized that they appreciate that the work is completely dependent on the talented people we have and they hope everyone will continue their service into the new Administration.

Today Reed followed up and asked us to share this note to Todd from Jared Kushner (incoming senior advisor to the President):

Todd,

Thank you to the leadership of the US CIO, USDS, TTS, and OSTP for the detailed presentation of their initiatives. I have heard only great things about you and the program you have built. The continued dedication to modernizing Government Tech is a mission critical task and we look forward to working with the many talented, dedicated tech professionals in these offices.

Yours,

Jared

I'm so pleased to get this confirmation that the incoming Administration values and supports our work, and even more that they recognize that it all depends on the talented individuals we have.

I joined TTS two months ago because of you and the work you do. Since then, I've become more and more impressed with your work, moved by your dedication, and committed to doing what I can to help us thrive and succeed. Thank you all for what you do.

Rob
